V. ADVICE

In its capacity as insurance intermediary, ING assures itself, prior to concluding an insurance contract, that it is consistent with the needs and demands of the customer on the basis of the information obtained from them.

To this the fact is added that ING may, if the case applies and based on the circumstances and country of residence of the customer, provide advice to the customer, meaning a personal recommendation on the matter of one or a number of insurance products, by explaining the reason why a particular product best matches the demands and needs of the customer. Whether or not there is advice will be specified by the customer.

When the insurance product is an investment product based on insurance, ING must likewise gather supplementary information in advance in respect of the customer so as to assess respectively that the product is suitable and appropriate for the customer, whether ING provides advice to the customer or not.

Finally, ING may also provide, as the case may be, advice after the concluding of the insurance product by the customer, especially when this is an investment based on insurance, in cases of decisions or adjustments made to an investment strategy.

VI. PERIODIC ASSESSMENT

In cases of provision of advice relating to investment products based on insurance, the insurance intermediary may provide the customer with an assessment of the adequacy of the insurance product that has been recommended to them.

ING hereby however specifies that it does not provide a periodic assessment to the customer once the product has been taken out. Nevertheless, the latter may specifically ask ING the question.

VII. COMPENSATION

Within the framework of its business of distributing insurance, ING is compensated on the basis of commissions of every kind paid by insurance companies, meaning a compensation included in the insurance premium.

Prior to any taking out of an insurance contract, ING forwards the information of the company in respect of the entire insurance premium including in this the costs, taxes and other expenses tied to it and which will be set based on the covers desired. The customer has the right to request details of the costs.

The Customer is likewise advised that the common placement funds (OPC) in which they may be drawn indirectly to invest through their insurance contract may compensate ING by a commission generally calculated on the basis of the management commission of the latter and which varies depending on the asset classes, investments achieved/currently awaited, and rates negotiated in the terms of the distribution contract signed between NG and the OPC considered, of some percent to some tens of percent in certain cases.

VIII. APPLICABLE LAW AND COURTS WITH CONCERN

Under proviso in respect of cases where the law applicable is determined by legal or regulatory, imperative or public order provisions, the law of Luxembourg applies to all disputes concerning relations between the customer and ING.

Under proviso in respect of cases where the courts with concern are designated by legal or regulatory, imperative or public order provisions, all disputes fall under the exclusive concern of the courts of and in Luxembourg.
